Father Larkin has distinguished himself by his administrative ability. In New Orleans particularly he accomplished much. The church of the Holy Name of Mary, of which he had charge for 18 years, is today one of the most beautiful Catholic churches in the south. The late Archbishop Blenk stated publicly on one occasion that the parish of the Holy Name was one of the best in the archdiocese. The parochial school, which 18 years ago had only 175 pupils, is attended now by over 600 pupils and the number would be larger if the school had room to accommodate them. When he

Public Health Nursing.
What a tragedy is a forest fire! One moment there is the glory of a verdant woodland, with the fragrance of the tiny wood-spirits dropping by, and the next moment, bursts into flames that turn this living beauty into a blackened waste. Even extravagant America has awakened at last to the destruction of her forests and is fighting to preserve them, by methods both direct and indirect. The latter take the form of education of the public mind that the evil can be prevented; danger may be promptly discovered, and with actual fighting once the fire gains a start.

Tuberculosis is the hidden spark in the forest of health, just as dangerous, just as preventable; and we wage a winning fight against it, by the same way as against the forest fire. First there is the method of prevention, with its campaign of education, striving to catch the eye and catch the heart and offset the evil.

In time this method will doubtless prove its greater efficiency, but while it is comparatively young it must give first place to the more direct method of control, control by the removal of the cause. The tuberculosis clinic is like the lookout station of the forestry service, the elite doctor of the forest ranger. We all know the saying that the first few minutes of a forest fire are the most critical. The earliest beginnings of such a disease as tuberculosis. Can we then overestimate the value of such service as the clinic offers to everyone?

In the city of Norwich, the funds raised locally by the sale of Christmas seals maintain the tuberculosis clinic, through the co-operation of the Public Health Department and the United Workmen. On Tuesday nights throughout the year the clinic is open from 7 to 8.30 p. m. at No. 9 Washington street, the United Workers House.

It is especially desired that the doctors of the city shall avail themselves of the opportunity to send or bring their patients to the clinic, for confirmation of diagnosis by the tuberculosis specialist in charge.

Big Double Feature Bill at the Strand.
Lip reading comes natural to the film fan. He can usually tell just what the players were saying at the time the picture was taken. There are many pictures that are far more interesting and realistic. There are some stars and players who enunciate so clearly and distinctly that the spectator fancies he heard the words spoken. In other words, the action upon the optical nerves disturbs the nerve centers of the brain which control hearing. Thus the illusion.

Harry T. Morley who will be shown in "The Sea Rider" at the Strand theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, is considered one of the best actors of this type on the screen. It is possible for the average person to make a word uttered by the star in this production. The scenes with Grandma Hancock, who is a trifle hard of hearing, are exceptionally well done, and the words practically jump out from the screen.

Mr. Morley has always been associated with fighting roles. But "The Sea Rider" gives him his first opportunity to portray a fisherman. There is an atmosphere of mystery and mystery that holds the interest and reminds the spectator of happy hours at the seaside. There is plenty of action in "The Sea Rider" and some spectacular scenes. The principal roles are played by the crew of a burning ship. Mr. Morley and Louisa Valentine face head danger in the burning cabin while effecting their rescue from the doomed vessel. Latest Seaside news weekly completes the programme.

Love, politics, and crime combine to make gripping situations in "The Work of God" and "The Sea Rider" picture featuring Zena Keefe, which opens a three days' engagement at the Strand theatre today.

The picture shows a political fight in which father and daughter are ranged on opposing sides. There is charming love interest and enough mystery and thrills are included to satisfy the most discerning of playgoers. The story was written by George S. Irene Leeb, well-known newspaper woman, and directed by Larry Trimble.

Breed Theatre.
Men may come and men may go, but the quest for love and life goes on forever. You mortals who are seeking the rescue for the Supreme Happiness, which leads to the Gates of an Everlasting Paradise, and who will find the splendor of love in the arms of a true man, life and love, "Living Love," which is the feature attraction at the Breed theatre today and Tuesday. The most remarkable picture ever assembled under one banner, including Florence Peterson, Florence Vidler, Joseph Kilgour and Margaret Livingston are seen in this picture. The story is of a woman who is a victim of a man who is seeking to crush a monster of evil and save her to a great love as staunch as the Rocks of Gibraltar. It is a Thomas H. Ince production, a drama of love and life, the Pathe News and a Century comedy.

Davis Theatre.
Full scope is given to George Fitzmaurice's detailed plan for blending a swift-moving romantic story and a lavishly artistic backgrounds that is in many respects even more appealing and spectacular than Mr. Fitzmaurice's "On With the Dance" and "The Right to Love." It pleased a large audience at the Davis theatre last evening and will fair to play to crowded houses during the remainder of its run.

With settings that shift rapidly from a languorous South Sea life to the resorts of London high society and then to an opium den in the Limousine underworld, the story, written by Ouida Bergere, is well supplied with thrilling moments. Mac Murray is seen as a pearl-smuggling reeve, while David Powell, the other featured player, is a young London scoundrel who seeks to forget an unfortunate love affair, drifts to the tropics. Through the love of the South Sea maid, his shattered faith in womanhood and in his career is restored.

The pleasing work of Miss Murray and Mr. Powell is supplemented by that of a thoroughly adequate supporting cast which includes George Fawcett and Dorothy Cummings. It is a Paramount picture.

A very funny Paramount comedy and a Paramount Magazine will also be shown.
